Malta's Correctional Services Division Data

2019

- There are 26 inmates convicted for DV
  - two of them have 2 cases
  - 11 inmates were charged with murder related to domestic violence. 7 of which were found guilty and sentenced from 25 years of imprisonment to life. 4 inmates are still in their awaiting trial stage.

Malta's Correctional Services Division

- In 2018, the Psychology Unit at CCF followed 30 perpetrators of D V (3 of whom did not have an official record of DV offences).
- The main types of interventions carried out were :Cognitive Behavioural Therapy and Anger Management Programmes.
- 12 perpetrators were responsive to treatment, 9 were not responsive to intervention that dealt directly with their aggressive behaviour due to denial, justifications and other cognitive distortions and 5 showed no marked improvement. In 4 cases, intervention was terminated prematurely due to the perpetrators attending a residential drug treatment programme or due to mental health issues that required treatment.

- Openness to treatment was a facilitating factor, with both therapeutic interventions and cooperation with other agencies mainly with child protection services, probation services and drug agencies. One perpetrator also conducted a joint session with his partner and victim of his crime. Within the same year, a research about the lived experience of an IPV perpetrator was conducted by the same Unit. The data collected from this case study provided a snapshot into the contributing factors of risk and potential violence of perpetrators of IPV, as well as their treatment needs. It highlighted a need for change in legislation with regards to the identification of potentially dangerous persons and the importance of continuity of supervision and care.

Mental Health Services

- Forensic Psychologists working within Mental Health Services offer interventions to both victims and perpetrators of domestic violence who access the mental health system and CCF.
- These offer training to police officers (Reflective Practice, an essential tool when dealing with Domestic Violence cases), teachers (Reflective Practice and Managing the classroom – recognising the victim ) and hospital staff (Eating Disorders and Domestic Violence: What does the Dentist have to do with it?) in relation to DV.
- They also work with the Commission of Domestic Violence with regards to training, conferences and the Peer to Peer group. In addition they liaise with the Victim Support Unit in the Police Department regarding risk assessment when a case of domestic violence and/or gender based violence is reported.
- Currently working together with the Psychology Unit within the PPD, to present the need for further assessment and treatment services for perpetrators during the Peer to Peer Workshop being held in March 2019.

Collaboration between services and tools used for assessment of Perpetrators

- In general cases of Intimate partner Violence are referred to MABS at APPOGG, however in some cases (e.g. Personality problems etc) they are referred to Probation services
- Collaboration is mainly with Appogg, DPP and mental health professionals e.g psychiatrist
- Cases are assessed individually. Some cases might have problems with generalised anger, others more instrumental violence etc (focus is on the risk and needs)
- Tools used for assessment are the SARA and the DASH
- LSI-R and HCR-20 also used

Any questions?
